

The Arts

Produced in association with the Bowes Museum

RSC brings magic to a transformed leisure centre

JULIUS CAESAR by William Shakespeare
Royal Shakespeare Company, Hambleton Leisure Centre, Northallerton, 14-18 September

THE Royal Shakespeare Company's touring production of Julius Caesar came to Northallerton.

The performances took place at the Hambleton Leisure Centre, in the Sports Hall. The RSC On Tour takes the theatre itself, as well as the actors and stage crew, to parts of the country rarely visited by large-scale professional drama companies.

In less than 24 hours, a 500-seater auditorium is erected in a space normally occupied by badminton courts and five-a-side football.

The exhilarating anticipation created by the transformation of this familiar hall into a wonderful new shape with exciting possibilities was buzzing round the building.

It was as if magic was in the air: The theatre had come to town.

The play - Julius Caesar - is as disturbingly relevant to the present day, as it was when Shakespeare wrote it in the sixteenth century. RSC's modern dress production was deliberately ambiguous as to its contemporary points of references.

Outstanding among the actors was Christopher Saul as Caesar. He had the stature and presence to evoke the arrogant confidence of a triumphant leader, and the exaggerated swagger of the showman craving public attention and flattery.

Zubin Varla's Brutus was conscience-racked, but also short-tempered and domineering when angry; an unsympathetic characterisation.

Cassius (Adrian Schiller), the arch-conspirator, and Mark Antony (Gary Oliver), Caesar's hatchet man, were both identifiable as modern political types.

The audience clapped and clapped until the badminton nets shook!

PAM GRUNWELL

A journey through millions of years of geological time

THE North Pennines are among the finest landscapes in the country.

Designated an area of Outstanding Natural Beauty in 1988, it is almost 2,000 square kilometres, the second largest of the 41 such beauty spots in the country, and one of the most remote and unspoilt places in England.

Lead Mining Landscapes of the North Pennines Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty shows the area in all its splendour, using a mixture of spectacular aerial and landscape photographs by Graeme Peacock.

Among the 100 or so glossy photographs that adorn the book's 98 pages, some of the most outstanding shots include those of Teesdale's Holwick Scars, Falcon Clints and High Force.

Elsewhere, writers Ian Forbes, Brian Young, Clive Crossley and Lesley Hehir explore the range of factors, both natural and human, that have shaped the area and the features that give the North Pennines its distinctiveness.

Concentrating on the development of lead mining in the area, the book highlights the various ways that the industry has changed both the landscape and the local communities. As the writers point out,

Rugged: The Pennine landscape

more than 2,000 years of exploitation of the area's reserves of lead ore not only carved a new landscape but also developed the area's industrial heritage of mine sites, washing floors, smelt mills, villages and farmsteads. The book also focuses on the new discoveries of archaeologists.

Although much has been written about lead mining in the 18th and 19th centuries, relatively little is known about mining before this time.

Using written mining records of the 13th and 14th centuries, the book explains the discovery of lead veins in Elizabethan times and describes the dangerous conditions miners were made to work in.

Similarly, the recent work of geologists is used to show how the rocks and landscape of the North Pennines record a journey through millions of years of geological time.

Written in an informal and accessible style, Lead Mining Landscapes of the North Pennines Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty reminds the reader that we have some of the most beautiful and interesting landscapes in the country on our doorstep.

Lead Mining Landscapes of the North Pennines Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty. (Published by Durham County Council, 98pp), by Ian Forbes, Brian Young, Clive Crossley and Lesley Hehir, photographs by Graeme Peacock, is available at the Teesdale Mercury shops at Barnard Castle, Middleton-in-Teesdale and West Auckland, priced £9.95.

This play confronts real issues with raw honesty

TALK ABOUT THE PASSION by Graham Farrow
THE ARC Theatre, Stockton-on-Tees, until October 9.

HOW does a father deal with the violent death of his six-year-old son at the hands of a paedophile?

Is the tabloid media distorting and undermining the values of our civilised society?

These are the two big questions addressed in Talk about the Passion, a seventy-minute two-hander playing at The ARC Theatre, Stockton-on-Tees until Saturday 9 October.

Mick Miller, father of the murdered child, briefly becomes aspirant author Jason Carroway, to obtain an interview with Evelyn Ayles, who has edited a highly successful book written by his son's murderer.

Miller is a working-class Teessider whose life has collapsed around him, but who still dreams of his son playing for the 'Boro'.

Ayles is one of Thatcher's children; she places a high priority on personal grooming and her driving force is making money, for herself.

Their clash is physically and verbally brutal. The father must have our sympathies, but when he seems intent on strangling and/or raping the woman, we fear for her safety no matter how obnoxious she has been.

But not for long. Evelyn Ayles is repulsively resilient.

The sickening point at issue is that Mick Miller has not only to come to terms with his son's murder, but that he has also to live with the way society, under the corrupt influence of the media, treats him, the victim.

Vilified unjustifiably by the press, he is rejected by his wife, his mates and his own father.

He has to watch as strangers salaciously pore over the murderer's book, reading the horrifying details of his son's torture.

Ayles' attempt to match his angry despair with her experience of a botched abortion strikes the wrong note for Miller, and indeed for the audience.

Is she telling the truth or dramatising it? However, she has clearly recovered her sang-froid.

Her ensuing manipulation of Miller's need for revenge is chilling, not least because one suspects an ulterior motive. The play ends as it began: Evelyn Ayles, successful book editor, receives her post. She also gets her just deserts.

Playwright Graham Farrow, who lives and works in Yarm, reports that the initial idea for the play came from the media reaction to the murder of Jamie Bulger in 1993.

Media events since that time, which have shown increasing evidence of the manipulation of the news and public opinion by the tabloid press, underline the importance of the question he asks here in such starkly tragic circumstances.

Actors Daniel Ainsleigh (currently appearing in ITV's Steel River Blues) and Philippa Peak are utterly convincing in their two very different roles.

Ainsleigh is outstanding. He has perfected the way in which working-class men tell a story: it is a style that verges on 'stand-up', until you realise that what he is recounting here, is desperately, heart-rendingly sad.

Peak cleverly matches Ayles' ultra-smooth exterior with glimpses of her ruthless determination within.

The set, designed by Michael Taylor, underlines the discontinuity between Mick Miller's experiences and Evelyn Ayles' attitude to life. Her office is coolly understated in white, with pretentious abstract art in red and black.

If there are tickets left for the last few performances, do not miss the opportunity to see this play which confronts a real contemporary issue with raw honesty.

PAM GRUNWELL

Out & About

Wednesday October 6

Slide show

'Iceland', by Joan and Ian Martin.
7.30pm in the Methodist Church Hall, Barnard Castle, Admission, including coffee, £2.

Age Concern information bus

Bowes, near the Ancient Unicorn, 10am-12noon. Also at Cotherstone near the Village Hall 1.30pm-3.30pm.

Thursday October 7

Teesdale Photographic Society

Clifford Staley - Austria. Slides and prints for Yorkshire and South Durham.
7.30pm in the Masonic Hall, Middleton-in-Teesdale.

Cotherstone 50/60 Club

Harvest festival and AGM.
7.30pm in the Village Hall.

Middleton in Teesdale carnival committee

Meeting, including AGM.
7.30pm in Middleton Primary School.

Glass Engraving Exhibition and Demonstration

Demonstration by local artist Lawrence Staley.
10am-4pm daily until October 13. Castle Gallery, Witham Hall, Barnard Castle.

Flower Class

Mickleton Village Hall every Thursday for ten weeks.
Tel: 01833 622378

Friday October 8

Harvest Festival Service

Followed by Harvest Festival Supper.
St Mary's Staindrop. 6.30pm.

Pic'n Mix concert

With wine and savouries. A collection will also be taken for 'Send a Cow to Africa' Winston Church, Winston.

Out and About is a free service. Deadline for entries is Thursday at 12noon for the following week. We regret that we are currently unable to take Out and About entries over the phone. Send entries to Out and About, Teesdale Mercury, 24 Market Place, Barnard Castle, DL12 8NB, email them to editor@teesdalemercury.co.uk or drop them into our office in Barnard Castle or Middleton-in-Teesdale. Every effort will be made to publish every entry received, however, pressure of space means we regret that we can not guarantee publication. To guarantee publication of your event details contact our advertising department on 01833 633605 to discuss a What's On advertisement.

7.30pm. Admission free.

Saturday October 9

Barnard Castle Ramblers

11 miles of paths and old railway route.
9am John Street. Cars to Dales Centre car park at Stanhope to catch 10am no 101 bus to Westgate. Return via West Rigg, Bishop's Seat, Staifold, Spains Field.
Tel: 01642 341205.

Sunday October 10

Harvest Festival

Guest preacher Astley Fenwick will be joined by children from Forest School. Music from Middleton and Teesdale Band. 6.30pm James' Church, Forest and Frith.
Tel: 01833 693181

Winstanley Harvest Festival

Family service at 9.30pm. Children are asked to bring donations of produce.

Monday October 11

Barnard Castle and District History Society

Rokeby and Sir Walter Scott with guest speaker Mr D Butler.
United Reformed Church Hall, 2pm
Tel: 01833 631299

Tuesday October 12

Teesdale Carers

Hands on Health Course. Aimed at carers young and old, who are looking after a relative. 10.30am-12.30pm. Carers Centre, 35, Victoria Road, Barnard Castle.
Tel: 01833 630202

Middleton-in-Teesdale male voice choir

Concert, followed by harvest supper. Proceeds in aid of Rokeby and Brignall Church Funds.
Moritt Arms Hotel, Greta Bridge, 7.30pm. Tickets cost £5.
Tel: 01833 638034

New fundraiser at Bowes

THE Bowes Museum, Barnard Castle has appointed a new member of staff to its team.

The new post of Fundraising and Sponsorship Officer has been taken up by Kate Le Sueur, 23, who began work at the prestigious Museum early September. Her role is to generate income for the Museum, a registered charity, to support the restoration and development project along with conservation projects, acquisitions and the dynamic exhibitions programme.

1793
Bonhams
AUCTIONEERS & VALUERS

Do you value your treasures?

Curious to know whether you have something of value? It could pay to talk to Bonhams.

We are seeking antique furniture, paintings, ceramics, silver, jewellery and works of art for forthcoming sales.

For expert advice with a view to selling through Bonhams call Henrietta Graham or Claire Jarman on 01677 424 114

Butterwick Hospice Care

Bonhams, Market Chambers, 14 Market Place, Bedale DL8 1EQ
www.bonhams.com

Charity Valuation Day in aid of Butterwick Hospice

The Church Hall, Newgate, Barnard Castle, Co Durham
Wednesday 13 October
11am to 3pm

A team of specialists will be available to advise on antiques including silver, jewellery, books, pictures, ceramics, furniture, and all works of art. £1 entry and £1 for each item valued. All proceeds to Butterwick Hospice at Bishop Auckland

NOW OPEN

Distance No Object

Contemporary installation by acclaimed artist Lubaina Himid and friends

Open 11.00 a.m - 5.00 p.m. every day

THE BOWES MUSEUM

Barnard Castle, County Durham t: 01833 690606
w: www.bowesmuseum.org.uk e: info@bowesmuseum.org.uk

The Arts is produced in association with

THE BOWES MUSEUM

EXTENSIVE RANGE OF DIARIES FOR 2005

NOW AVAILABLE AT ALL BRANCHES

OF THE Teesdale Mercury A Diary for every occasion

THE VILLAGE BOOKSHOP

Second hand books
New books in stock or to order

Naxos Classical CD's
Middleton-in-Teesdale
Tel: 01833 641133/640378
OPEN ALL WEEK (inc. Sundays)

Autumn clearance?

Oxfam desperately needs good quality saleable clothes and bric-a-brac.

Studio 2000

Creative Wedding Photography
Professional Personal Attention by Malcolm G. Singleton
Photographer, 20 years experience.
Tel. 01325 281000

ALOE VERA

Try our Aloe Formula Drink with glucosamine & chondroitin a nutritional powerhouse!
Choose your lifestyle in harmony with nature.

ALOE VERA DIRECT
01388 834803